NYC restaurants serving Thanksgiving dinner

Let someone else do the cooking for you this Thanksgiving.

Just because you're not eating at home (and cooking a multi-course meal in a tiny kitchen) doesn't mean you can't enjoy a traditional holiday feast: Plenty of New York City restaurants are serving turkey dinners with all the traditional fixings on Nov. 23. If you're looking for vegetarian options or something less conventional, some spots are offering steak, leg of lamb, fish and risottos as entrées. And the best part about going out with your family and friends is that you won't have to do the dishes after dessert.

Here's where to make your reservations before they fill up:

Benjamin Prime

This Murray Hill steakhouse will serve a traditional turkey dinner that includes an appetizer (your three options are: pumpkin soup, pictured; an autumn salad with roasted beets, walnuts and goat cheese toast; or burrata with honey and balsamic dressing) and a choice of pumpkin or pecan pie for dessert. The price of the meal covers tea and coffee. ($75 per person, 23 E. 40th St., Manhattan, benjaminsteakhouse.com)
