

Golf Digest® GolfWorld®

15 Questions With Lucas Glover

Shame on us. Media and fans alike. Too often we throw a blanket over young players not named Tiger, and it's emblazoned in bold letters: B-O-R-I-N-G.

Without really getting to know them, we assume they're lifeless drones in khakis and white shirts. Granted, Lucas Glover didn't do much to change that perception even while surviving the rain and the big names like Mickelson, Woods and Duval in winning the U.S. Open at Bethpage. It's what he did in the afterglow that had people rethinking. Glover proved to be quick-witted, well-read and good-natured. He's old school, too, introduced to golf by his grandfather, Dick Hendley, a former pro football player and Clemson great who built a successful industrial-cleaning business from scratch. And he was taught by the late Dick Harmon. With Lucas Glover, and we suspect others out there, there's much more to the man than we see between the ropes.

Fitting. How'd you celebrate your U.S. Open win that Monday night in New York?

We hustled into the city, Jennifer and my parents, my agent, coaches and a few close friends. Had a nice evening at Benjamin Steak House.

http://www.golfdigest.com/magazine/2009-09/lucasglover\_interview